

Citation Guidelines for Materials Held by the Huntington Library

The Huntington Library asks that researchers give adequate citations of Library materials that they have quoted or illustrated in their publications. Citations should always include the wording “The Huntington Library, San Marino, California.”

The further identification of items will vary across collections and formats, but should typically include the following:

- Call number (if assigned) or box/volume/folder number(s),
- Item title or description, and
- Date(s).

Image Credit Guidelines for Huntington Library Materials

Captions for published and exhibited images of materials from Huntington Library collections should include appropriate credit information. Certain collections have specific credit lines that must be used when reproducing materials from those collections; these may be found in the applicable catalog record or finding aid.

The following examples apply to the majority of situations, where specific credit lines have not been stipulated.

If the entire image is not used, the term "detail" must be included in the caption.*
